The evening session, the closing one of this year's conference, was devoted to the discussion of the Indian outbreak in Dakota. The whole matter of the causes of the trouble was pretty well gone over, but the remedy was not such an easy matter to find. Mr. Herbert Welsh, secretary of the Indian Rights Association of Philadelphia, took the ground that the whole difficulty might have been avoided with proper legislative action. Dr. Langford told a story illustrative, as he thought, of the Indian's gun.
